Hormones & Peptides

Peptides are an extensive category of agents consisting of interconnected alpha amino acids. The composition of this group includes synthetic and natural compounds, which in turn contain several thousand monomers. Focusing on the vastness of the group, experts imply a wide variety of peptides and their purposes for the human body. At present, the substances that give the greatest effect when engaged in bodybuilding and various sports that require a set of muscle mass or loss of extra pounds in the form of body fat are presented for consideration.

What is growth hormone?

Somatotropin is a human growth hormone whose production occurs in the anterior pituitary gland. Belongs to polypeptide hormones along with a lactogen of placental origin and prolactin. Normally, the synthesis of the polypeptide responsible for human growth occurs during the day. Moreover, certain peaks are characteristic of its secretion. The maximum peak value occurs in the first 1-2 hours after fully falling asleep. In a dream, peaks are observed every 3-5 hours.

But with age, growth hormone decreases significantly, and by old age its synthesis is completely stopped. Various ailments and the systematic administration of certain drugs, including amino acids, also affect production decline.
